

Freelance Mental Health Trainers

Manchester Mind is an independent local mental health charity which delivers advice, information and support to thousands of young people and adults every year.

As well as our service delivery, we provide a range of different mental health awareness training courses and talks to the community, public and private sector across Manchester. Due to growth in demand, we are looking for experienced trainers to join our training bank in order to support delivery of our well-regarded training programme.

We encourage applications from people with lived experience of mental health issues as well as those who have a personal connection, employment history or interest in this area.

We are looking for enthusiastic and committed individuals who will work positively with our clients, our volunteers and with existing trainers to deliver high-quality and engaging training courses, helping to contribute to our overall aim of improving the lives of people in Manchester with mental health issues.

As well as delivering our range of existing training courses, we are looking for enthusiastic individuals who will work with us proactively to help improve our existing course content and materials, develop new off-the-shelf and tailored courses and who will deliver additional talks and workshops as per our clients' needs.

The recruitment process will involve a period of shadowing followed by an assessment by one of our existing trainers before an individual is admitted to our bank of trainers.

The rate of pay is:

- £17 per hour during the induction period
- £20 per hour once induction is passed

Your work will be supported by our Training Co-ordinator and existing Trainers and you will have the opportunity, should demand allow, to develop new areas of knowledge and experience.

If you would like more information about this role please contact Mary Patel, Training Co-ordinator, on 0161 769 5732 or email: mary.patel@manchestermind.org
